

Feathered Hair Meets Hollywood

While Farrah Fawcett's Charlie's Angels iconic hairstyle fueled a nationwide desire for feathered hair, today, that term has a whole new meaning. Feathered hair literally implies feathers are being worn in the hair as extensions; it's a look that doesn't appear to be going away any time soon.

Every day, another glittering star is photographed wearing feather hair extensions. The trend erupted after pop star Ke$ha showed off her feathered hair style at the Grammy Awards. Then, the fashion world was abuzz when Steven Tyler donned colorful rooster feathers on the American Idol Season Finale.

Celebrities Teens & Adults - Feathered Hair

Since then, stars like Jennifer Love Hewett, Selena Gomez, Hilary Duff, Jessica Simpson, Miley Cyrus, and Bella Thorne have sported the feathered hair look. Even mature stars like Roseanne Barr are enjoying the trend. The actress wore an understated plume that blended seamlessly with her grey hair during her appearance on the Oprah Winfrey Show.

While the aforementioned stars have been seen strolling about town with feathered hair, feather hair extensions are popping up on small and big screens. Aria from the television show "Pretty Little Liars" dons several rooster feathers that skillfully hang over her shoulder. And in a promo for Glee's Fashion's Night Out, Dianna Agron, Ashley Fink and Jenna Ushkowitz were all seen wearing at least one feather hair extension.
